

33 VITAL LEADERSHIP SKILLS

FOR IDENTIFYING AND DEVELOPING
HIGH-POTENTIAL
EMPLOYEES

THE EDUCATION SECTOR IS KNOWN FOR EMPLOYEE LONGEVITY AND JOB SECURITY, which is why senior positions are often held by older generations in the workforce. However, as the Silent Generation and the Baby Boomers retire, they will leave gaping holes in teams that will need to be filled. In fact, 1 in 5 US Residents will be at retirement age by 2030 (US Census).

The best way to prepare for this is by developing existing team members ahead of time in preparation for them to take over managerial roles when current leaders retire.

Developing the right skills and prioritizing employee growth is also essential to maintaining a workforce that is keen to stay with your organization. According to TinyPulse's Retention Report, a lack of appropriate management skills makes employees four times more likely to leave. Developing these key leadership skills can both increase your workforce's stickiness and provide a more stable transition as leaders pass the baton to younger generations.

Here is a list of the most sought after qualities of leaders that can be used to identify the promising individuals in your organization and prime them for growth.

- 1 Displays motivational skills that galvanize a team around a common goal
- 2 Effectively communicates with other departments and teams
- 3 Exhibits solid time management skills and has consistent record of meeting deadlines
- 4 Sets clear expectations and goals for themselves and others
- 5 Leads productive 1x1 meetings, whether with subordinates or their manager
- 6 Delegates tasks to team members
- 7 Takes the initiative to suggest new solutions and processes
- 8 Takes responsibility for errors, mistakes, and misjudgements that occur

- 9 Trains, coaches, and mentors others without being asked
- 10 Accepts and is willing to try new ideas and suggestions from others
- 11 Is adept at navigating internal and external resources for gathering knowledge and conducting research
- 12 Actively strives to learn and absorb new information
- 13 Shows a knack for managing and resolving conflict
- 14 Has a deep understanding and commitment to the organization's vision and goals
- 15 Follows through on commitments
- 16 Effectively listens to others in and out of meetings
- 17 Articulately contributes ideas and perspectives in meetings
- 18 Relates to others across the organization
- 19 Takes a disarming approach when providing feedback that allays the nerves of other team members
- 20 Shows trust in team members and managers

- 21 Takes a genuine interest in other people
- 22 Demonstrates a foundation of good judgement
- 23 Expresses empathy for others
- 24 Shows a willingness to take calculated risks after evaluating risks and opportunities
- 25 Is flexible and open to organizational change and improvement
- 26 Expresses gratitude and recognizes others' hard work and accomplishments
- 27 Asks for increased responsibility
- 28 Respectfully offers opposing opinions with tact
- 29 Is willing to make decisions and own the results of those decisions
- 30 Reads articles and books on management and leadership topics
- 31 Sets meaningful goals, tracks progress, and keeps manager informed of status
- 32 Volunteers to take the lead on projects and initiatives
- 33 Networks to build relationships across the organization

